

Biography:

This website is administered by Steve Spiegel; I am an independent scientist living in the Pacific Northwest who now focuses on reversing ALS symptoms. My affinity for science was initiated by my father's interest in natural science; my interest in theoretical science developed after experiencing unique insights about stress and human psychology during early adulthood. My understanding of stress inspired decades of obsessive, independent investigation into the natural science foundation of the current psychology/psychiatry paradigm. Meanwhile, I supported myself, my wonderful wife and two beautiful children with a job managing a commercial maintenance company until retiring in 2014. Along the way, I enjoyed family time, van camping, and other time submerged in nature.

Decades of investigating the impact of stress on human psychology culminated by unifying (eastern) binary science (and the binary science of computers that model the brain) with western physiology theory for pure foundational natural science (linked through the homepage). Unfortunately, OHSU neuroscientists considered my short Unified Natural Science contrary rather than faulty so I turned to proving its value treating a disease, and focused on ALS. I was fortunate that Dr. Bedlack (Duke Neurology) documents ALS Reversals that I can explain and offer suggestions for duplicating. Thereafter, I developed a free, holistic treatment designed to duplicate the success of documented ALS Reversals, and this website to promote my program.

I am now focused on promoting trials of my ALS treatment to expand the number of ALS Reversals exponentially, and prove the effectiveness of Natural Science Therapy and the value of unifying eastern and western natural philosophies.
